Presentations

UT System Research Misconduct Policy

Robert Nobles presented the revised Research Misconduct Policy which included formalizing the process and implemented on September 15, 2016. The policy clarified that all student research activities (e.g. thesis, dissertations, etc.) fall under the new policy. One clarification included providing a better definition of research:

“a systematic experiment, study, evaluation, demonstration, or survey designed to develop or contribute to general knowledge (basic research) or specific knowledge (applied research) by establishing, discovering, developing, elucidating, or confirming information about, or the underlying mechanism relating to, the subject matter of any academic discipline (no just the physical sciences) in any University setting and includes development of a Research Plan. This definition is intended to include scholarship and all creative works.”

The responsibility to decide actions related to findings of research misconduct will be determined by ORE, Vice Chancellor for Research and Engagement in concert with the Associate Vice Chancellor for Research Integrity. When allegations are received, they are assessed and the individual who has allegations against them are not told or shared. Disclosure of the individual is not shared until the process moves into the inquiry phase. Discussion occurred between the Council about the process and the pros and cons of sharing to targeted individuals about the allegations. There have been 100 or so allegations received and most have been related to plagiarism and publication practices and 90% of the allegations are made anonymously and 97% of them are dismissed through an objective process. The goal is not create antagonistic environment. The issue is open for discussion and the Council is encouraged to provide feedback to Dr. Nobles.

ACTION: Robert and Holly Mercer will create a fact sheet on publishing with a potential presentation to the Graduate Council to discuss Research Plans and potentially departments submitting dissertations through the iAuthenticate before entering into TRACE.

ACTION: Add Holly Mercer to future agenda to discuss publishing for faculty including copyrights and library support services.
